

East Asian Library

University of Southern California
Los Angeles, CA

“There seems to be a unanimous feeling that you have created a beautiful space here. Whether they had known what the building looked like before or are coming in for the first time, virtually everyone remarks on how striking the Library is. Even I, who have been coming into the building almost everyday for three-and-a-half months, still find myself noticing new subtle little details.”

“Apart from the final results, I would also like to comment on what a pleasure it was to work with you on this project. Your enthusiasm and genuine interest in the project turned what could have been a stressful chore into a truly enjoyable process. And I also appreciate that you made such a valiant effort to make me feel as if it were I who was making design decisions. If it were not for the fact that I am happy with the space I have now, I would be glad to work with you again sometime.”

The East Asian Library project involved complete renovation of the historic 1928 Stoops Educational Library on the University park campus of USC. The new Library houses the East Asian collections including Chinese, Japanese and Korean Prints as well as electronic media and artwork. Project scope included check in, check out, & information counters, stacks, study areas, secured rare collection area and ADA upgrade.
